The University of Minnesota, Morris (UMM) seeks to fill a tenure track position in Clinical Psychology or Counseling Psychology. We are looking for someone to teach an annual course load of 20 credits (typically 5 classes), which may include some of the following courses: Personality, Counseling Theory/Skills/Intervention, Clinical/Counseling Capstone, Ethics, and other courses to be negotiated (possibly Psychopathology and Introduction to Human Services). As part of the annual course load, this position also supervises all internships in the Human Services major (this counts as four of the 20 teaching credits, or one class). Other responsibilities include supervising individual student projects, advising undergraduates, providing service to the psychology discipline and to the campus, and potentially teaching a freshman seminar. An active research program is expected, and research collaboration with undergraduate students is highly valued.

Position begins August 15, 2016. Salary and teaching load competitive. Prefer Ph.D. in Psychology or closely related field (appointment as Assistant or Associate Professor, commensurate with experience), but will consider outstanding ABD (appointment as Instructor).

The University of Minnesota, Morris (UMM) is an undergraduate-focused residential public liberal arts college serving about 1900 students. As one of five campuses of the University of Minnesota, the Morris campus is located 160 miles west of Minneapolis in the rural community of Morris. Morris is consistently ranked by U.S. News & World Report, Forbes, Fiske Guide to Colleges, Princeton Review, Kiplinger's Personal Finance, and Washington Monthly. The student body is talented, diverse and engaged. The Morris student body is the most ethnically diverse in the University of Minnesota system with 26% students of color (of which 17.2% are American Indian students) and 10% international students.
